THE BEATH-SUBVIVING SHILE.

Her eyelids as in sleep were closed, Her brow was white like snow, A smile will lingered on her cheeks, As if 'twee both to go.

And it may be a smile so sweet, Se quiet and screne. Was never on the healthy brow Of living maiden seen.

Perchance the wondrous blass which burst, Upon her reptured mind, When first show the in giver's courts, Had left its trace behind.

Rushes in the Olden Time-The Introducthen of Carpets
The author of Our English Homes thus illustrates the saying: "He does not care a atraw or a rush:"

"Even the floors of banqueting hall and ball-rooms were covered with rushes, for Shakespeare says that

"Hoke the sunseless rathes with their hoels"
"If the owner could boast of a carpet, it was reserved for the chamber or the parlor. Rushes not only allayed the dust, but served as a token of respect, 'Are the rushes strewed!' asks 'Grumio,' when expecting the arrival of 'Petrushio' and his bride. On the floors were spread new rushes when guests were invited. It was an old joke among the wits of the Elizabethan age, that many strewed green rushes for strangers, who would not give a straw for a friend. To cover the floor, indeed, was deemed so necessary a point of contrast that when point of courtesy, that when not performed it was said that the host did not care a rush or a straw for his guest; hence the origin of an expression common now.

"The use of these homely materials pervaded all classes; even the hall of the Virgin Queen, secording to Hentzuer, was strewed with straw. Among the middle class this custom prevailed at a much later period, and the welcome associated by time-honored usage with the strewing of rushes, returded the general introduction of carpets. Many retained the use of the homely herbage, whose wealth placed the looms of Italy at their disposal. "Carpets, however, which, during the middle ages, were rarely found except in the homes of royalty, were gradually becoming less expensive. Beaumont and Fletcher's coxeomb does not forget, among the luxuries with which he would have his house arwith which he would have his house arranged, to specify the 'Turkey carpets,' the use of which was so opposed to the habits of the people that they were, as yet, regarded as inxurious and foppish. Carpets, of 'Torquey makyne,' and carpets of silk covered, many of them, with beads and gems, were among the household treasures of Henry the Eighth. His Highness, just before his death, purchased of Lawrence Warren, merchant, a very fair carpet.' It was the most death, purchased of Lawrence Warren, mer-chant, a very fair carpet.' It was the most sumptuous 'tapet' in the royal household, being embroidered with venrie gold and trails of pearls on a groundwork of crimson satin; it was edged with a deep horder of gold and rows of pearls, and lined with green silk. Many of these beautiful carpets were the productions of English embroiderers."

Human Life the Greatest of Spic Poems. Human Life the Greatest of Epic Poems.

Life is an epic, nay, the greatest of all epics. Whether it be draped with the surroundings of a palace, or shivers in the penury of a cottage, still it is an epic—a conflict, heroic or not, as we choose to make it. History, ever eloquent in praise of the statesmen and warriors who have ruled and oppressed mankind, has made little account of that obscure but no less real valor that has lived and burned in the bosoms of the uncounted multitude. In our ignorant and childish folly, we all are too much prone to look for real men in places of power—while in fact we are surreunded with them, though, alas! too often we know them not. alast too often we know them not Look upon those who have just begun to y the hard temper of the world, with try the hard temper of the world, with scarcely a friend to cheer them, and a crowd to push them back. See with what patient fortitude and cheering courage they labor on, struggling like the swimmer in his agony, both to keep from sinking and to gain the wished-for shore. Or look again, and see them occupants of a field in which they have pitched their tents and rearred their banners. Still around them rolls the dim of environs. still around them rolls the din of envious hate and the sharp rattle of the slanderer's spears. In its outward experience and conditions, their lives are full of conflict and of epic daring.

Nor is this less true of women than of men. and home, a defense, yet as they are par-takers of this mortal life, so must they share its inevitable sorrows, too. And the mother who keeps watch and guard through weary days and toilsome nights over her juvenile care, and who survives long enough to see her mother's hopes blasted and her pious labors disappointed, though she may have no marble obelisk, when she is gone, to tell what things she did or suffered, is nevertheless to be ranked among these who have it days and toilsome nights over her less to be ranked among those who have il-lustrated the epic grandeur of human life.

Superstition of the Africans-Singular and Severe Ordeals Among the Wanika.

An African traveler gives some of the ordeals by which those suspected of guilt are tried, and which are quite as humane and satisfactory as those employed by our New England forefathers in cases of witchcraft: Kirapo ja Zoka, the ordeal of the hatchet. The magician who administers the oath, and performs the other ceremonles in connection performs the other ceremonies in connection with it, takes the hand of the supposed thief, or criminal, and makes him repeat as follows: "If I have stolen the property of — (naming the person), or committed this crime, let Mulungu (Heaven) respond for me; but if I have not stolen, nor done this wickedness, may he save me." After these words, the magician passes the red-hot iron four times over the flat hand of the accused; and the Wakambra believe that, if he is guilty, his hand will be burned, but if innocent, that he will suffer no injury. In the former case, the accused must undergo the punishment for the alleged crime, whether he confesses it himself or not, Mulungu having responded by means of the ordeal.

Kirspo ja jungu ja Gnandu, the ordeal of Kirapo ja jungu ja Gnandu, the ordeal of the copper-kettle. The magician takes an empty copper-kettle, makes it red-hot, and casts into it a stone called Mango, which emits sparks. He then add the "Raha ya Charati" a matin of a simulation of a simulation of the state of the sta emits sparks. He then adds the "Raha ya Gnonsi," a portion of a slaughtered goat, saying to the accused, "Heis lomborera," come, say thy prayer, to which the latter responds: "May God let me have justice." Then the suppliant reaches with his hand into the kettle, and takes out the glowing stone; and, if guilty, his hand and face are burned; if innocent, no harm happens to him.

Kirapo ja Sumba, the ordeal of the needle. The magician takes a thick needle, makes it red-hot, and draws it through the lips of the alleged criminal. If guilty, a quantity of blood will flow from the wound, but none if innocent.

Kirapo jo Kilahe, the ordeal of the plece of bread. The accused her deal of the plece a trapo o number, the orders of the piece of bread. The accused has to eat a piece of bread which has been poisoned. If innocent he will swallow it without trouble; if guilty, it will stick in his throat, and can only be ejected with considerable pain and loss of blood. Instead of bread, rice is often used.

EQUIVOCAL COMPLIMENT TO A JUDGE .- An

Leave to a Judge.—An attorney brought an action against a farmer for having called him a rascally lawyer. An old husbandman being a witness, was asked if he heard the man call him a lawyer.

"I did" was the reply.

"Pray," said the judge, "what is your opinion of the import of the word?"

"There can be no doubt of the "called". There can be no doubt of that," replied

"There can be no doubt of that," replied the fellow.

"Why, rood man," said the judge, "there is no dishonor in the name, is there?"

"I know nothing about thet," answered he, "but this I know, if any man called me a lawyer, I'd knock him down."

"Why, sir," said the judge pointing to one of the counsel, "that gentleman is a lawyer, and that, and I, too, am a lawyer."

"No, no," replied the fellow; "no, my lord, you are a judge, I know; but I'm sure you are no lawyer."

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

Financial Affairs. Monetary matters yesterday, no it In Monetary matters yesterday, no import-ing leature was developed. The market re-mained quiet with a better demand at some of the Houses, although Currency was gener-ally plenty and in excess of the legitimate inquiry. Rates of interest continued easy at 106612 per cent. for all the prime Paper offered, of which there is now much less than is usually seen at this season. The City De-posits are large for October, and balances appear to be accumulating with nearly all appear to be the Bankers.

Eastern Exchange was still in demand at Eastern Exchange was still in demand at 36 buying and 36 premium selling; some of the Bankers having paid 40c, for first-class checks on Philadelphia and New York. Boston and Baltimore were heavy, but very little was offered. Drafts on the last-mentioned city were purchased at 30c, and could not be solid higher, unless to some one who wished sold higher, unless to some one who wished to use funds there.

The rates of Gold remained at 1% and 3% premium, no one wishing it except for ship-

The buying rate of New Orleans Exchange was lower, owing to the improvement of New York Checks in the South. Dealers were irregular as to price; but Bankers' sig-natures were saleable at par.

Iowa, Illinois and Wiscousin Notes were still quoted at 1 discount. No change in any of the other Banks on the uncurrent list.

Flour was unchanged yesterday, with a moderate demand at $5 05@5 10 for superfine, 1,008 bris having been disposed of at the latter price at Lawrenceburg, Ind. The sales here reached 490 bris, only. A lot of Buckwheat was disposed of at $3 25@3 50 per 100 lbs. Whisky was without change: 1,100 bris, selling.

Provisions were firm and in moderate request. Mess Pork sold at $18 for city broads.

of Friday last:

The rally which commenced yesterday afternoon in the Stock market continued with great vigor this morping. The decline had been too sharp to continue, and the low quotations so rapidly touched brought in outside orders in abundance. The commission houses were fully employed, and great difficulty was experienced in filling time orders. The bear jobbers resisted the turn, but not with the same courses as yesterday, and with no effect.

The transactions throughout the list were to a very large extent, and well distributed, and the improvement was general, with but one or two exceptions. When the call reached Central the excitement was very great, and continued throughout the easied until a late hour.

The Money market, on call, is easier to-day, and the supply may be called abundant, at 7 per cent. The Banks, however, are not leading much, excepting to their regular deducts. Strictly first-class low as at any time within two or three months. On other descriptions the market is very irregular, ranging for good Sight single-name jobbers' Paper, from 5 to 12 per cent. Grocers' lines show little or no change.

The market for Eoreign Bills is very dull, with a no change.

THE VAST FLOW OF WATERS INTO THE OCHAN.—Some idea of the enormous quantity of water that is perpetually flowing into the oceans of the globe, is derived from the extent of its chief river basins. The Rhone, for example, drains the waters from an area of 7,000 square miles of country; the Rhine, which has a length of 600 miles by its windings, drains the water from a country of twice that area; and the Danube from 55,060 square miles of surface; but the waters from an area miles of surface; but the waters from an area of 300,000 square miles fall into the St. Lawof 300,000 square miles fall into the St. Law-rence, and those from 1,000,000 of square miles into the Mississippi, which, by its wind-ing, has a length of 3,500 miles. It is estim-ated that 1,800,000,000 of tuns of water fall daily into the Mediterranean, which, besides the great rivers that fall into it, receives more than twenty secondary rivers and in-numerable smaller streams. More than a fourth of the river water of all Europe falls into the Black Sea.

SUICIDE OF A DESPERATE WIFE. — Mrs. Elizabeth King, residing in North Memphis, Tenn., who separated from her husband some months since, and recently formed a new attachment for another man, committed suicide, last week, by swallowing poison, owing to his desertion of her. Previous to the commission of the act she locked herself up securely in a room, barring the door so as to prevent all ingress.
